ABORTION: A Clash Of Symbols Is Explored In Moral Choices This Week On Page 2

A LOT TO LEARN

Any aggregate of people has idiosyncracies.

The small town has several which have always bothered. And I have lived in small towns and cities and towns neither small nor large.

But small towns won't let their youth mature unless they move away. Small town churches and schools dwell on religion and classwork in adolescent terms supposed to educate without tampering with innocence, which is contradictory and impossible.

And until the 1970s, small towns have remained substantially places for young and old, relatively few between except in business, profession, or trade.

Small towns want to know enough to care and to gossip. There is a whole lot of "business" about other people's business. This is true to the "tattle-tale" mentality of sub-adolescence and the gossipy inactivity of elders.

The active years are often spent in cities, where "the money is," but where now the problems are. For younger ones who stay home, the waiting process leaves them gray and conditioned to accepting things as they are.

It becomes not to their interest to change or change things.

It is a contradiction in terms, rather a wholesome stagnation which allows so many in and so many out. The process ends when "new blood" flows in or old economics wear out.

This town almost lost its verve a decade ago. A lot of towns in Central Texas died before that. Thousands have disappeared in the Midwest from Mexico to Canada.

The ones that survive grow up. They not only let the "sunshine" in, but they let the modern problems in, the ones which go with the territory, the ones which "talk" won't solve and "goodness" is incompetent to handle.

What I am trying to say, I suppose, is that the difference between stagnation and growth in a small town is maturity, knowing the difference between experience and the mere passing of time.

Modern small towns have a lot to learn.

Death Clue Turns Up

HEARNE

Robertson County Sheriff E. P. Elliott reported that a credit card belonging to Jack Cooney III of Austin whose dismembered body was found in the Brazos River Dec. 2, had been used in the lower Rio Grande Valley. The credit card company forgot to flag the account and the card was used just five days after the body was found but no one knew of it until last week when his widow received a bill from the company.

Low Prices Recalled

ROCKDALE

The Backhaus brothers of Rockdale gathered to recall their four decades in the grocery business and recalled prices of groceries when their store opened in 1932. Coffee was 18 cents a pound, flour was 94 cents for a 48-pound bag, bananas were a penny each, and a combination deal listed 10 bars of IGA white laundry soap, two bars of IGA beauty soap, one large bar IGA floating soap, and a 10-quart galvanized pail all for 58 cents.

Sam Makes The Route

GEORGETOWN

Many cities have a working German Shepherd police dog, but Georgetown may be the only city with a working Dachshund postal service dog. Each day that Georgetown postal carrier Bill Frymire walks along delivering mail to homes on his route, a small, long bodied, short legged, and droopy eared dog named Sam goes too. The dog has been working at his self-appointed job for about 10 months and has missed only two days, both because of really bad weather.

New Jail Program Works

BELTON

The prisoner work-release program in Bell County has benefitted both prisoners and the county in keeping "weekend prisoners" on the job, according to county officials. The program allows persons sentenced to terms in county jail to serve time on weekends, rather than all at once. However, not every prisoner in the county jail is eligible for the work-release.

Court Bill Okayed

GATESVILLE

Gov. Dolph Briscoe's omnibus court bill which includes making Coryell County a one-county judicial district was okayed by the State Senate Monday. Designation of the county as a one-county district was recommended byCoryell grand juries several times in past years and also is championed by bar associations.

Dam Repairs Due Approval

ROSEBUD

Rosebud's engineering firm has completed all the plans for repairing the Rosebud City Lake dam and has submitted these to the state authorities for approval. Since this is an emergency measure, it is expected that the plans will meet immediate approval.

Auditor Is Pleased By Progress

The county's auditor reported to commissioners Friday morning that progress on implementing the new bookkeeping system is moving along well, with good cooperation from all county offices.

Ray Harris of Harris, Havens, & Co. told the court that the biggest problem is in the district clerk's office, which needs additional record-keeping books. Harris said deputy district clerk Dorothy Laffere made a trip to the district clerk's office in Bryan to study procedures in setting up the new system.

Harris will return in March and in April as part of his contract with the county, to view and report on the new system.

He said he will have more to show commissioners in a month when the county offices will have computer printouts of all transactions.

Harris commended the county clerk's office for having "model records," which he said he will show to other counties as a model.

He told commissioners that according to a new federal law, county books and revenue sharing funds will have to be audited on a one, two, or three-year basis starting this year.

Only other business for the short meeting was decision to have additional doors installed in the old basement tax office which will be the new home for the Extension office.

SHERIFF LEROY BROADUS displays a collection of antique arms recovered after a breakin of a Gause home. The collection included handguns, swords, knives, and reloaders. Five juveniles and an older youth were arrested in connection with the breakin.

Lott Offering Free Office For Doctor

LOTT

It's been 13 years since this town of 1,200 had a doctor to call its own, and the city council is trying to remedy that situation.

The council is offering free office space and water to a doctor who will set up a practice in Lott. Interested doctors will be interviewed by Jack Ruble, a retired Lott pharmacist. Ruble said so far he has not had any serious inquiries about the offer.

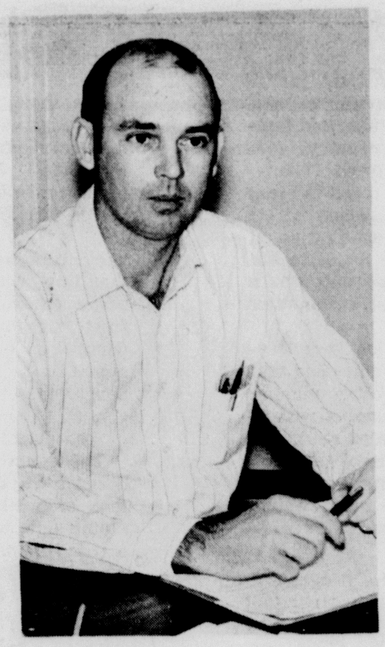
"The people are here are dissatisified with going to medical clinics in other towns and sitting around all day," Ruble said. "We especially need someone here to take care of the elderly."

The office space offered by the city council is in the remodeled library building. Ruble said "other considerations" might be made by the council to an interested doctor.

Lott's last doctor, Dr. Curtis McGinley, left for a position with more regular office hours. But "things have changed in the last few years," Ruble said.

Considering the population of the total Lott trade area, a doctor could possibly have as many as 3,000 patients a year, he added.

The nearest doctor to Lott resides is in Rosebud, 11 miles away.



DON JONES

Jones Named New Director For SCS Office

Don Jones has been named director of the Soil Conservation Service office in Cameron, replacing Wayne Mann who recently retired.

Jones, a native of Lampasas, comes to Cameron from Bryan, where he was a soil conservationist with that SCS office. He is a graduate of Sam Houston with an ag degree and also attended Tarleton State College at Stephenville.

He and his wife, Kay, have three children: Mike, 13; Glen, 11- and Donna, 6. They are at present looking for a house in Cameron so the family can move here.

"I am looking forward to getting settled here and working with rural and urban landowners in their efforts to control erosion and handle other problems of soil conservation," Jones said. He said no changes are planned at this time for the local office, which employs one soil conservation technician and one part-time employe.

In The News, Briefly

Laywell Named Chairman

The Broiler Committee of the Cameron Area Chamber of Commerce met Wednesday and named Ed Laywell chairman of the 1977-78 fiscal year.

The committee also announced that the Milam County Junior Broiler Show, normally held in the spring, will be held at a later time this year. The decision is part of an overall plan to revitalize the program.

Details for the next broiler contest will be announced sometime in April, according to Laywell.

Sewer Funds Approved

FHA funds for Buckholts' sewer project have been approved and the city will advertise for bids in about two weeks, according to a report to the Buckholts city council Thursday.

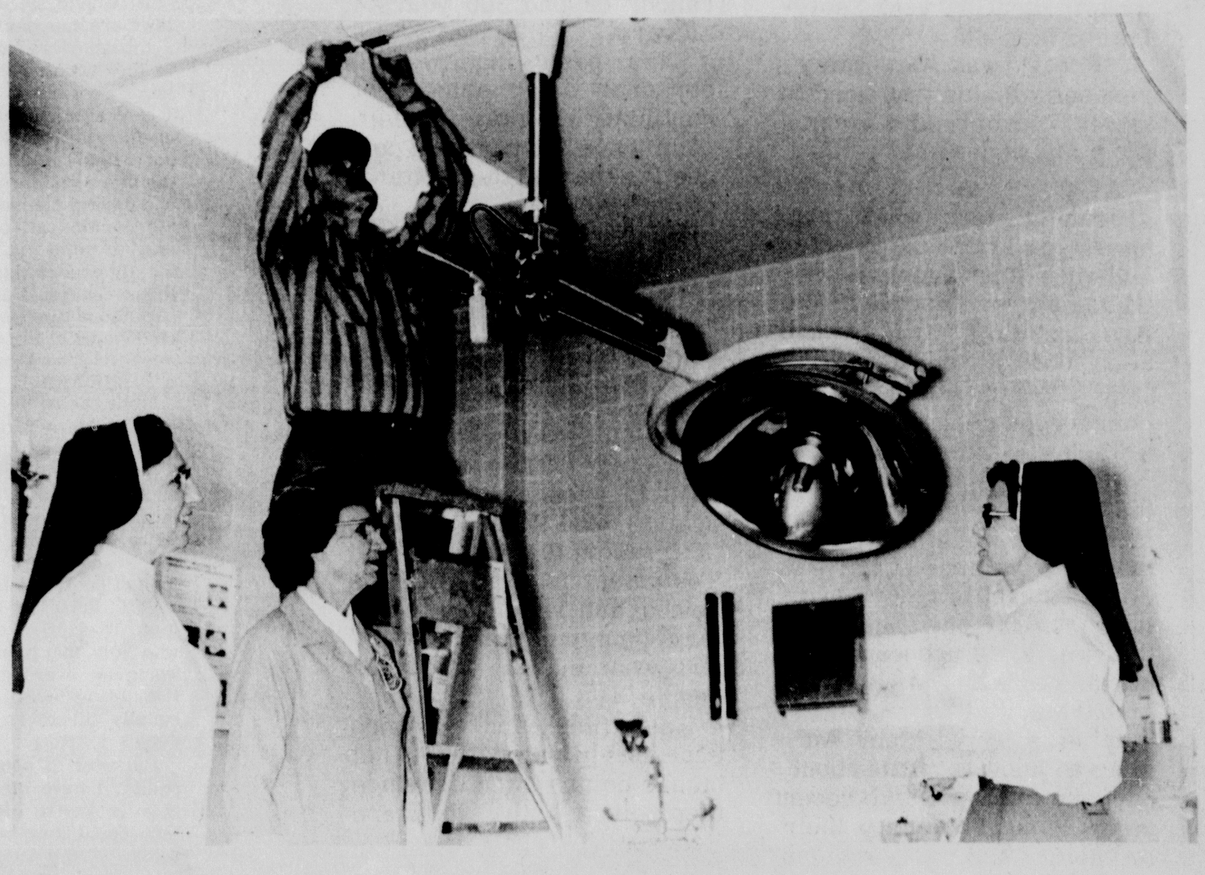
Council voted to increase City Marshal John Zajicek's salary from $200 to $250 a month; set a city election for April 2; and suspend for another 60 days Lone Star Gas Co.'s request for a rate increase.

Mayor Richard Crowe reported that street repairs are scheduled to start as soon as the weather allows.

Buckholts Museum Sets Tuesday Workday

The Buckholts Museum has set a workday for Tuesday, Feb. 8 from 10 until 4. Plans are made to rearrange and reorganize the exhibits.

Anyone interested in working or wanting to contribute items to be exhibited are encouraged to come. Visitors are also welcome during the day.



AUXILIARY'S GIFT--St. Edward Hospital and Auxiliary personnel watch as the hospital's maintenance man Alvin Meyer installs the new surgical light in the hospital's emergency room.

Bad Strip On US 77 Due Work

That bad strip of Highway 77 between Ben Arnold and the Falls County line is due some repairs and resurfacing, according to the Texas Department of Highways office in Hearne.

Calvin Shenkir, assistant engineer in the Hearne office, told The Herald Friday that the department is working on plans to repair the strip of roadway and hopefully work will start in late spring and early summer.

Plans call for leveling and placing of a new surface which will not be slippery when wet. That particular stretch of highway has been the scene recently of numerous traffic accidents, all happening when the road was wet.

Shenkir explained that when a new seal coat was put on the road last summer, the contractors may have used too much asphalt. He said the aggregate had sunk to the bottom, leaving too much asphalt on the surface with not enough roughage on top.

He said in a summer as hot as the last one, asphalt has a tendency to rise to the top while the rock and gravel sinks below the surface. The new asphalt was put on last summer because the surface of the road had become dry and brittle and cracking up, Shenkir added.

He said the only remedy in such a situation is to replace the whole surface.

Taxpayers Can Meet With State Tax Expert

If you have a question about state taxes or need some assistance, Comptroller Bob Bullock will have a representative in Cameron on Feb. 9 to meet with local taxpayers from 1:30 p.m. to 3:30 p.m. in the tax assessor's office.

The Comptroller's representative will answer questions about state taxes and assist with calculations of state tax returns.

Information on inheritance tax and on agricultural tax exemptions will be available. The representative will also have tax permit applications and current rulings on sales and use tax.

Being Himself, Ourselves...

After the "sturm und drang" of the Nixon and Johnson years, the casual-cardigan-sweatered Jimmy Carter succeeded to a calm opener in his first White House fireside chat.

Ranging widely over campaign pledges, problems, and needs, the low-key Georgian offered a visual contrast of some dimension between his two-week presidency and any predecessor.

By now, people, including the approximate half who did not vote for him, feel more confident in the business community, even though the Big Board the following day dipped, and less queasy that abrupt changes are underway.

Not that abrupt changes may not come. The President's ranging commentary reconciled, but promised sweeping inquiry into government and its size, an energy policy, welfare reform and tax refunds, though more token than real in light of realities.

His staff is labeled "iconoclastic" while his actions have been anything but precipitate. His only administrative record in Georgia suggests he is capable of "fell swoops" if he thinks it is critical.

The one thing Mr. Carter and all presidents learn in but a few hours in that office is how little a president actually can do. He said precisely that.

The office is being deemphasized by the actions of his predecessor and by this incumbent. Yet, it is a gold fish bowl, moral force and repository for all of this great people's hopes, trust, and fears.

In view of the November 1976 vote, that the trappings of office are being reduced, that Cabinet meetings are opening the press, and a largely reconstituted Washington press corps at that, in view of these things early on, it seems President Carter is rationalizing the plus and minus of plurality government along that thin line which elected him.

His first media assertion of leadership was softsell and consistent with campaign appearances. It seems to us he is trying to be himself, no small order at 1600 Pennsylvania Ave. It's up to us to find ourselves, to have less dependence on Presidential sanctions.

They, Too, Are 'Chosen'...

At last. At last.

Eighty million Americans, black and white, shared an inquiry into a basic problem of identity one black writer spent 12 years solving for himself.

"Roots" was Alex Haley's response to his own need to know: "Where did I come from and what am I?"

ABC's multi-night screening last week may have pulled a greater audience than Super Bowls, Olympics or the Kennedy Assassination. It may have been one of the most cohesive contributions in one courageous decision to shoot a week of primetime.

Haley goes back to Gambia in seven generations. it is indeed a world white America knows little about, except through the colonial relationship of our ancestors, the Western Europeans who conquered with guns and missionaries.

It is a world black Americans know too little about, because they have until recent years sought identity their instincts and traditions rightly knew were "out of sync" with experience.

Haley's discoveries about himself easily introduces alternative prides to black Americans who must overcome rancor beyond 300 years of slavery.

This basic inquiry, this personal establishment of continuity do more for self-confidence and personal perspective than all the militancy of the 1960s.

Haley helps us to see all of us, the universal need for continuity, to understand that to go someplace, we must know, not guess or wonder in legend, that we have been someplace.

The Jews knew this 5,000 years ago. They were the first to prescribe public education, the Moses concept of freedom for all. The Old Testament is a treatise on Jewish and Middle East history, a reminder of who and what makes "a chosen people."

Haley finds, and television broadens his discovery, that human beings must convince themselves they, too, are "chosen."

Abortion: Clash Of Symbols

By Daniel Callahan

Editor's Note: This is the fourth of 16 articles in the series, "Moral Choices in Contemporary Society." In this article, Daniel Callahan, director of the Institute of Society, Ethics, and the Life Sciences, discusses the moral arguments involved in the bitter controversy over abortion. These articles, which explore the controversial moral dilemmas that perplex Americans today, were written for Courses by Newspaper, a program developed by University Extension, University of California, San Diego, and funded by a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities.

Even in a nation well familiar with acrimonious debate, the struggle over abortion takes a special place. It intimidates politicians, and divides the churches. It often sets husbands and wives at odds, and remains an open source of dispute among physicians, who are as divided as the rest of society.

This debate is not peculiar to our time and place. Abortion has been a subject of fierce argument for at least 3,000 years. It was capable of dividing primitive tribes and families and has, in our century, seen a wholly bewildering pattern of changes in the law. If the trend in many Western countries in recent years has been toward a liberalization of abortion laws, just the opposite has been true in Eastern Europe, where it is harder now to get an abortion than a decade ago.

It is said that abortion is a "religious" question--but churches take moral stands on any other number of moral and social issues without those issues being labeled religious.

It is said that abortion is a "medical problem"--though the evidence is overwhelming that most women seek abortion for personal and social, not medical, reasons. Abortion is euphemistically called "pregnancy termination"--though it is clear that pregnancy is only so terminated by killing a fetus (feticide).

It is said that, if abortion is accepted, then infacticide and the killing of the elderly are certain to follow --though this has not happened in any modern country that in recent decades has liberalized its abortion laws.

It is said that restrictive abortion laws are imposed by repressive males --though every survey ever conducted in this country indicates women are more opposed to abortion than men.

It is said that abortion is an offense against the sanctity of life--but opponents of abortion are not among the more visible marchers against war and capital punishment.

I mention all of these contentions only to point out that it is an emotionally charged issue, in which neither those favorable to legalize abortion nor those opposed have a monopoly on dubious arguments.

THE MORAL DIMENSION

Is it possible, in the midst of such strife and passion, to get some moral grasp on just what is at stake?

The key problem is to decide how and in what way it is a moral problem. For those who hold that the fetus is nothing but "tissue," no more important than a hang-nail, then of course there is no moral issue at all; abortion becomes one more item of elective surgery. For those who hold that women have no rights whatever over against the right-to-live of a fetus, then that position equally dissolves any moral dilemmas.

But even if people talk that way in public, I have met very few who are able to be so clear-cut in private. How could they be? Whatever one's theory of the fetus, it is undeniable that, even after 7-8 weeks, it looks suspiciously familiar. It looks, well, human. Maybe it should not be called a person, or a human being--but there it is, and it appears more than a trace like the rest of us.

Yet what does that tell us of moral significance? For it is argued that the fetus is too little developed to claim the status of a person, and much too little developed to say that its interests and welfare must always override those of a woman who wants an abortion. That is not an easy view to dismiss.

WHAT IS A PERSON?

There is no agreement whatever in this country about when human life, much less personhood, begins. It is not just that the public is divided. So are philosophers, theologians, and scientists. If we mean by "human being" or "person" only that which is genetically unique, then the fetus would obviously qualify. If we mean something more--an ability to relate to other people, or to reason, for example--then the fetus would clearly not qualify.

Or we may choose to look for some mid-point in the development of the fetus, a dividing line which would avoid the dubious result of declaring even a newly fertilized egg a person, as well as the equally dubious result of failing to declare a fetus a person until shortly before or even after birth. "Viability," which is normally thought of as possible after 24 weeks of gestation, is one of those attractive dividing lines. So at least the U. S. Supreme Court decided in its famous 1973 abortion decision.

The trouble with trying to find such a line, however, is that it is very difficult to explain just what that line, whatever it is, rather than some other line. Why not use the first sign of brain activity (which occurs as early as the 7th week of gestation)? Or the beginning of a heart beat?

ALLOCATING RIGHTS

These are serious puzzles. They become all the more troubling if we look at the broader problem of deciding how we should allocate rights and to whom. Should we in the first place even try to determine who is a person and who is not? Blacks, one recalls, were solemnly declared nonpersons as late as the 17th Century. In our own times, the Nazis had no hesitation whatever about killing those they thought unworthy of legal protection.

In short, if we even begin trying to decide who should and should not count as a person, we may be setting the stage for any manner of moral abomination.

Still, one cannot ignore the claims of those women who feel they should have the right, in the case of the fetus only, to decide its fate. Even if it is a hazardous moral enterprise to allow one group of people (whites, women) to have total power over another group (black, fetuses), it may also be hazardous to deprive individuals of those free choices which may decisively determine their basic health and well-being. (This is exactly the way many women frame their demand for abortion.)

The great strength of the claim, however, that women should have the right to choose is--whether we like it or not--that the status of the fetus is morally uncertain. If may have rights, it may not; who can know with any certainty? For me personally, that uncertainty is just enough to tip the scale in favor of the woman who wants an abortion.

It is a choice, though, with which I at least live uneasily. Women have been oppressed through the ages, in great part by being given no choice about their own bodies. As a symbol of a final liberation from the bondage of a fixed biological destiny, the right to abortion is powerful.

Yet what a disturbing symbol. For it is a symbol of freedom which can only be realized by crudely affirming still another symbol--the strong killing the weak.

Even if a fetus is not human, or not a person, it is the beginning of all individual life. In killing a fetus, we kill possibility and we kill life. It may be that the world is so inherently rotten and irrational that we must choose one good (freedom) at the expense of another (life).

Yet I wish I could dismiss a nagging thought. The fault may not lie in the way the world is. It may lie in ourselves, ever prone to elevate our private self-interests to the status of high moral good.

If you are scouting around for a project, why not work with your local Boy Scout or Girl Scout group?

bringing up baby

Mothers may not think infant footwear is necessary because babies tend to kick it off, but I'd recommend one or two pairs of socks or knitted booties.

Or you might prefer the 100 percent nylon stretch socks. Thanks to the built-in stretch, they tend to grow with baby's feet, and still keep their shape permanently.

COOKING Brilliantly
TIPS FROM THE TOP

You can make a smashing three bean or other vegetable salad if you make sure the vegetables don't get smashed. Wash them and then place them in a strainer in a sink of cold water and mix them there.

You'll probably get praise for meats that you braise and then boil, such as stews and pot roasts, if you add cold water or stock rather than hot to relax the tightness braising causes. This reduces the cooking time, too.

Plans New Fuel Sources

Texas Power and Light, through its parent company, Texas Utilities Company, will be acquiring and developing coal and other fuel resources in New Mexico, TP&L officials have announced.

A new Texas Utilities Company subsidiary, Chaco Energy Company, located in Albuquerque, will be responsible for developing a program for the production and delivery of fuel, principally coal. The operation will also include a land reclamation program.

TP&L officials note the coal, along with East Texas lignite and nuclear fuel, is a vital part of the company's long-range planning to provide the electricity required by TP&L customers, while continuing to reduce dependence on scarce and expensive natural gas.

Based on present planning, mining operations will begin in the early 1980s.

Senator Has Hopes For Land Bill

AMARILLO

State Senator Max Sherman said here that a bill that would assess farm land based on its agricultural use and not its potential value for development "stands a good chance to pass."

Sherman addressed the convention of the Texas Farmers Union in the Hilton Inn. He said also that he expected the Governor's recommendation that the state's share of school taxes be increased to 90 percent "will prevail."

Sherman, chairman of the Senate Committee on Natural Resources, cited three "indispensable" ingredients in the agricultural future of Texas: "land, water, and energy."

He called for the development of a state water plan.

He said Texa s will not produce enough energy for its own uses by 1980 or 1981.

"We must develop our lignite reserve and then reclaim the land," he said. "We must develop our solar potential. . ."

He pointed ut that the Texas Panhandle is already a leading area in the development of wind energy research.

"The Texas legislature must concern itself with energy prices he said. "Farmers in my district are now concerned as to whether they can continue to pump irrigation water, either because of availability, or because of price."

"Even if you use the short form, it could pay you to see Block."

Even the short form is more complicated this year. So to be sure you pay the smallest legitimate tax—it could pay you to see Block. And if switching to the long form will save you money, Block will show you just how much.

Austin Dubbed Best

By Jack Cavanaugh

NEW YORK

Reuter--Some experts say that pound for pound she's the best female tennis player in the world.

So Jack Kramer says she's in the mold of Maureen Connolly, Helen Wills, and Chris Evert. And Bobby Riggs, whom she has beaten, says he's never seen a player as good at her age.

The subject of this adulation is Tracy Austin, a pigtailed blonde teenager from Rolling Hills, California, who has emerged as America's latest tennis sensation.

Only a month past her 14th birthday, the 4'11", 85 pound Californian has already won one professional tournament this winter and scored victories over such world class professionals as Greer Stevens of South Africa and Lind Mottram of Britain.

Since playing in her first tournament at the age of 9, Tracy has captured 10 national titles and collected nearly 200 trophies.

Virtually without competition in the 14-year-old class (of which she is national champion), the California wunderkind entered the national girls' 18 championship last summer and got as far as the quarter-finals.

This past week, playing in her second Virginia Slims event, Tracy upset Miss Stevens before losing, 6-3, 6-3, to Rosemary Casals, one of the world's top-ranking players. Two weeks ago, the youngest member of the tennis-playing Austin family won the Avon Futures tournament in Portland, Oregon, a satellite event whose top players move onto the Virginia Slims circuit.

In the eyes of many veteran tennis observers, Tracy Austin carries a "can't miss" label. Kramer and her teaching pro, former Dutch Davis Cup player Robert Lansdorp, believe she is destined to succeed Chris Evert as the reigning queen of tennis.

"She has what every champion needs: a strong desire to compete. And she hates to lose," said Kramer at whose Rolling Hills tennis club Tracy practices two hours every day when she is not playing in a tournament.

He added: "I've never seen a player her age that good. I don't think she was a weakness and she's quick and agile."

Riggs, like Kramer, is a former U. S. and Wimbleton champion. He was beaten, 6-2, by Tracy in an exhibition match last year before a crowd of 5,000.

Landsorp, who has been working with Tracy since she was 7, agrees with Riggs that she has no weakenss in her game. "Her service is not hit hard, but she is able to follow it to the net at times," Lanscorp told Reuters. "Her ground strokes are solid, she has a good lob and her forehand and backhand are equally effective. And she has an outstanding volley."

For a while Lanscorp tried to get Tracy away from her two-hand backhand. "That's a detriment in volleying," he said. "But I've stopped trying to get her to hit it with one hand, although she does it occasionally."

"Her one fault is that she feels she has to try to blow strong opponents off the court," Lansdorp said. "When she does that, she loses a lot of her finesse."

Comparisons with Miss Evert, America's last teenage tennis phenomenon, are, of course, inevitable. Miss Evert skyrocketed to prominence as a 15-year-old when she beat Margaret Court and a number of other top-ranking players and then went on to reach the semi-finals of the U. S. Open at the age of 16.

Tracy seems to have a more solid all-round game at a comparable age, although her backhand, strong as it is, does not appear to be as potent a weapon as Miss Evert's at 14.

"The one big difference is that Tracy is more aggressive than Chris," Lansdorp said. "She likes to go to the net, something Chris never did early in her career."

For a 14-year-old, Tracy has remarkable concentration and poise. "She has a purpose for every shot she hits," Lansdorp said. "She doesn't just try to return a shot."

A straight-A student in the 8th grade, Tracy is mature beyond her years. "She may look like an 11-year-old but on the tennis court she thinks like a 25-year-old," Lansdorp said.

Given her family background, it's not surprising that Tracy picked up her first tennis racket at the age of 3. Her oldest brother, Jeff, 24, is a touring professional, and her sister, Pam, 26, currently is a teaching pro, spent three years on the women's pro circuit and has played with the Phoenix Racquets of World Team Tennis.

Tigers Take Three From Yoemen Cagers

The Rockdale Tigers invaded Yoe gym Tuesday night to meet the Cameron Yoemen in District 23AA basketball action.

The junior varsity girls opened the action at Yoe gym and the Tigers managed to outscore them 56-31.

The Yoemen trailed throughout the game, never being able to put it all together and overcome the Tigers.

The first quarter saw the Yoemen only four points behind as the Tigers held a 12-18 lead. But by the half the Yoemen were down by15 points as the Tigers had dominated the courts and led the game, 27-12.

The Tigers continued to put the pressure on in the second half and the Yoemen were unable to overthrow the Tigers as they left the courts well in command of the game, 56-31.

Leading JV scorers were Pam Kimbrel, who tallied 12 points; and Vicki Brashear, who finished the game with 11 points.

In girls varsity action the Yoe girls fell to the Tigers 56-39.

As the first quarter ended, the Tigers held a slight 4-point advantage, 14-10. As the half came to a close the Tigers had only been able to expand their lead with 10 as they led the Yoe girls, 30-20.

The Yoemen fought back in the second half, but all attempts were fruitless as the Tigers' offense continued to tally points while a strong defense held the Yoe girls half.

The leading scorer for the Yoemen were Tululah Green with 29 points and Evelyn Pittman who took in 10 points for the Yoe effort.

The boys varsity game closed out the night's action at Yoe gym as the Yoemen were overpowered by the Tigers, 56-42.

The Yoemen trailed at the end of the first period, 12-6, and were down at the half, 26-16.

The Yoemen opened the second half with a strong defensive press. But while the press slowed the Tigers' scoring attack, the Yoe offense failed to put the points on the board that they needed to secure the win, falling to the Tigers, 56-42.

Greg Kelley led the Yoemen in scoring as he tallied 10 points, followed closely by Gerry Heitman and Errol Spells, both tallying 8 points for the night.

Coach Kenneth Poole said, "They just out-played us all over the court. We only had eight turnovers for the night, but our shooting percentage was poor and while we brought down only 27 of our rebounds, the Tigers brought in 43. The Tigers hit 46% of their field goals while we hit 20% of our total attempts. We have been shooting in the 20-30% range for the past few weeks, and to win the team needs to be hitting in the 40-50% bracket."

CYO Cagers Net Win Over LaGrange

The Cameron boys Catholic Youth Organization (CYO) Basketball Team traveled to Bryan Sunday January 30 to participate in Diocesean competition.

The team won the competition, defeating La Grange 53-51, the Cameron team scored in the final seconds of the game to win the Championship.

The team went undefeated throughout the district and diocesean play, a total of eight games to become the new Champions.

How many do you have?

The price of electricity has gone up in recent years and must continue to go up to enable Texas Power & Light Company to keep pace with the drastically rising costs of producing and supplying electric power.

Even so, take a look at your most recent electric bill. Divide the amount of the bill by the number of days of service it covers. This was your average daily cost.

Now, make a list of the electric appliances and equipment in your home and think of the conveniences, comforts and pleasures they provided.

MANILA

The Philippines is embarked on a gamble that could end a centuries-old internal conflict and also strenghten its relations with the Islamic world. The man emerging as a prime mover towards a solution of the problem with the southern Philippines Moslem minority is a leader ngenerally portrayed in the West as difficult and erratic: Libyan head of state Mauammar Gaddafi. The conflict with the Moslems has cost thousands of lives in the past four years.

NEW DELHI

Indian archaeologists are renewing a quest for historical evidence to back the literary version of the life of Rama, the god-like hero worshipped by millions of Hindus. Rama's story, the Ramayan, is one of the two great epics of India, along with the Mahabharata. Its impact on Indian culture is something like a merger of the Bible with Homer's Iliad. Digging will take place at Ayodhya, a village in the northern Indian state of Uttar Pradesh that is traditionally regarded as the birthplace of Rama, a valiant prince who survived 14 yearsof exile and countless battles against demons.

HAVANA

Vestiges of the Cuban middle class' past splendor lie in a convent in the Port of Havana, which houses the most unlikely bric-a-brac in this communist country. The 18th century secularized cloister has been turned into a state-run warehouse where antiques, seized from the wealthy who fled into exile or bought from impoverished aristorcrats, are resold to foreigners for hard currency. A few years from the bustling docks, past the massive studded door, one steps into a silent world of silver candelabra, ivory statuettes, monogrammed silverware, and dusty period furniture.

NEW DELHI

India has been given a whiff of democracy after 19 months of rigorous emergency rule, and for many Indians the smell is sweet. But others are skeptical. And among the villagers, who make up most of India's 620 million people and who are dependent on the whim of local rather than national leaders, the news has probably made little impact as yet. However, in the cities and particularly in New Delhi, the capital, there is an almost tangible new mood since Prime Minister Indira Ghandi's announcement that general elections would be held shortly.

PARIS

The six squabbling heirs of Pablo Picasso finally have agreed on how they will split up his fabulous legacy, a giant collection of property and art worth an estimated $240.8 million. When the Spanish artist died at his home in southern France in 1973, at the age of 91, he left thousands of paintings and drawings, but no will. One of the most prolific artists of the 20th century, and certainly the most famous, Picasso also left behind him a legal tangle as difficult to decipher as his most complex cubic canvases.

STOCKHOLM

Some plan to stay in Sweden, where they have jobs, homes, and families. Others are in a state of suspense, hoping Washington will rule favorably on their cases and allow them to return to the United States. The American exiles in Sweden, military deserters who opted out of the Vietnam war, have been here nearly 10 years and a few have become Swedish citizens. Since 1967, more than 1,000 Americans have come to Sweden because of opposition to the Vietnam war. This figure includes both deserters and draft evaders but President Carter's selective pardon covers only the draft evaders.

ADDIS ABABA

The killing of two more government employees by so-called anti-revolutionary elements in Ehtiopia has added to a steadily increasing death toll on both sides of the political fence here. Police Captain Asserfa Teferi became the latest victim of anti-government forces when he was gunned down on his way home from duty on Dec. 8.

ROME

Italian justice, often criticized for its inefficiency, is trying for the fourth time to find out who was responsible for the deaths of 16 people in a bomb explosion seven years ago. There is a wide choice of suspects. There are 33 people facing charges connected with the bombing, the worst in Italy since the end of World War II.

NOTICE

This is to advise that the Community Development Agency has submitted their application for Third-Year funds to the Department of Housing and Urban Development, Dallas, Texas. This application is for funds in the amount of $136,000.00. This application is available to interested parties upon request at the Community Development Agency, 112 E. First St., Cameron, Texas. Any person desiring to assert, in litigation or otherwise, that any portion of an application in accordance with P. 570.306 (b) is plainly inconsistent with generally available facts and data, other than Federal census data, is required to submit to HUD a precise description of the identity and location of documents containing the data upon which such person relies. Such submission may be made to HUD prior to the submission of the application or any time thereafter but not later than 30 calendar days after publication of the notice that the application has been submitted to HUD. (Interested citizens may obtain information concerning the date by which a unit of general local government must submit its application from local officials or the HUD area office.) The submission by such person shall specifically state with respect to each identified document which pages contain data upon which the person relies, and shall state with respect to each item of data the specific item in the application asserted to be plainly inconsistent with such item or data.

HELP REDUCE RISK OF NEEDLESS DEATHS

Home fires kill 12,000 Americans annually. Many could have survived if they'd had adequate warning and been briefed on fire emergency procedures. Home fire drills are a very effective way to make sure that every member of your family knows what to do in case fire breaks out in the home. Talk to your family about it tonight. Some points you'll want to emphasize include:

- Sleep with bedroom doors closed. They'll briefly provide a temporary barrier for fire and smoke.
- If a door is hot to the touch, don't open it. It takes only seconds to be overcome by fumes.
- Every family member should know alternate routes of escape from bedrooms if doors and hall-ways can't be used.
- Set up a central gathering point safely outside the house and make sure everyone knows to go there for a head count.
- Once outside a burning building, don't go back inside under any circumstances.
- Practice fire drill procedures until they're practically reflex—especially for young children. Too often youngsters will panic in an emergency situation and hide under a bed or in a closet with tragic results.

Once you're aware of the procedures, an early warning of a fire is critical to getting out in time. A smoke alarm such as the one by General Electric can warn you of a fire. The Home Sentry smoke alarm by GE continuously "sniffs" the air circulating around it and will sound a penetrating 85 decibel alarm when it senses smoke reaching it. It's available as an easy-to-install battery operated model, or a unit featuring a 9 ft. cordset that can plug into an electrical outlet. In addition, a third type can be wired into the home's electrical system. Both wired-in and corded models feature a Signal Indicator Light, which shows that the unit is energized and working, and a unique system test-fire drill button. In addition to the test-fire drill button, the battery-operated unit features a 30-day low battery "beep" warning when the battery is low. A flag pops out when the battery is removed to remind the householder to replace the battery. All models include a red button in the middle of the unit; by pressing it, you can test the entire system to be sure it's working properly.

There is no guarantee against fire, but with the proper precautions and by making use of a smoke alarm like the one from General Electric, you can reduce the risk of needless tragedy. Additional units will further reduce risk.
